Bingham Makes It Plain For Every Tobacco Man

Founder of Co-operative Selling Plan Delivers Great Address to Farmers of Madison County

Judge Robert W. Bingham, owner of the Louisville Courier-Journal and Times, and founder of the movement to organize a co-operative association for the handling of burley tobacco, roused a great crowd to a high pitch of enthusiasm in a speech at the court house Monday afternoon, in which he declared that the wise, sensible, the prudent thing for the growers of Madison county to do was to come in and join their neighbors.

Referring to the fact that one of the warehouses in Richmond had today declared itself in favor of standing by the burley growers, Judge Bingham said that if that one warehouse proved to be insufficient to care for the crop of Madison growers pending their sale, this county was the home of speculators and then tried to get in. He cautioned the outsiders in the burley movement to consider whether they might not be found in the same position.

In answer to a question, Judge Bingham said that the books of the Association certainly would close December 10, as previously announced, and that after that date no crop of the present year would get the benefit of the work of those who already had joined the association.

Judge Bingham was introduced by County Chairman T. S. Burnham, in a brief speech. He was given a cordial reception and made a profound impression on the big crowd. He was cheered heartily when he referred to rumors that he was a possible candidate for "some office or other," and said that "there is no truth in that." He said, however, that if it were true that he had an eye on an office two years hence, or four years hence, it stood to reason that he would come now offering a good proposition to those from whom he might expect political favor and support in the future.

Judge Bingham asked the outsiders where they expected to get help financially and said that the growers in the organization not only would have the support of the bankers of Kentucky, but of the federal reserve system and the war finance corporation.

Judge Bingham told of the proposition of the Louisville banks to lend the association a million and a half dollars recently and said that no sooner had the news been published that a big bank at Cincinnati offered to loan the association twice as much and rather protested against being denied a share in the business of the association. He said that representatives of three of the largest concerns in New York had been in Kentucky recently seeking a share of the association's business and anxious to lend it money.

Referring to the way the farmers sell their tobacco, Judge Bingham asked what would happen to the business of the merchant who offered his goods in the same way, by laying them out on the floor of a warehouse and selling them to the public at whatever price was offered them, "That merchant would go broke in sixty days," Judge Bingham said, "and besides that we should have a jury sitting on that merchant's case, for we have a place in Kentucky to send people who do such things as that. And yet that is the very thing you tobacco growers have been doing for years. You know how to grow the best tobacco in the world but you do not know anything about selling it. It is the purpose of this organization to supply that defect. We expect to get the best of tobacco experts to handle the business of this association and we shall fix the price when it is sold."

Referring to the 50,000 members of the association as an army, Judge Bingham said:

"It is an army of construction which brings peace and happiness, not an army of destruction bringing destruction and burning and demolition. It is an army of men working to help, not one whose business it is to hurt an enemy. It is an army whose purposes is the benefit to a great people, not one whose object is the weakening of an enemy. It employs no force, for we would not have a Kentuckian coerced or even a rough word used in presenting the purpose of this great army of peace. But it is up to 'one of the country's great constructive builders,' referring to Harry B. Hanger, and he declared that if warehouse facilities for the pooled crop proved inadequate it was his purpose to call upon Col. Hanger and 'whether it cost $10,000 or $100,000 to build such a warehouse as might be needed to put in his hands the money necessary and tell him to go ahead and build it.'"

Judge Bingham told of the preliminary work of the organization, of the difficulties that had been overcome and said that the Madison growers are not now being asked to help organize something but were being given the opportunity to join something already organized, not something just being started, but something which was an established fact.

Judge Bingham told of the plight the California prime growers found themselves in when they stayed out of the organization, were made the victims of you now to consider and to consider well, what shall be your position should you remain out of this movement."

Judge Bingham closed his address with a powerful appeal to the growers of Madison to stand together. He pointed to the small amount of tobacco left out of the pool in other counties and to the extreme improbability that there would be enough of the unpooled tobacco to keep the market here open. He said that the prudent thing for the growers who had not yet signed to do the sensible thing, was to come in while the books were open and enjoy the benefits that would accrue to those who stand together in the association for living prices and better conditions in the burley district.

The county court room was crowded to the doors and a hundred or more persons were unable to obtain entrance to the room. Another hundred or so stood about the walls and even in the aisles for almost the entire length of the building. As Judge Bingham told of the work of

Madison County Fox Hounds Do Well At Southern Ohio Meet At Gallipolis

Madison county fox hunters did exceptionally well considering their limited representation, at the annual meeting of the Southern Ohio Fox Hunters' Association at Gallipolis, Ohio, last week. S. B. Berryman, of College Hill, this county, returned with a handsome silver cup won by his dog, Arp, by String, in the endurance stake, and a handsome cup and several other honors which were taken by a dog owned by Dillard Hill, and two owned by Maupin Bros., of this county, which he also took along.

Mr. Berryman says that the meet was a big success in every way and largely due to the work of President Arthur Beagle, of Racine, Ohio, who is well known to all Kentucky fox hunters. There was a fine show of extra good hounds, and the competition was keen in all the contests. In addition to the handsome cup won by his own hound, Tuncup, by Scott, owned by Dillard Hill, was awarded second honors in speed and driving and third in hunting and trailing.

Both of the dogs sent by Maupin Bros. are by the famous sire String, Liz, one of the best from the Maupin kennel, won the silver cup for highest general average. Turp was second in hunting and trailing and third in endurance.

had been done for the tobacco growers in the organization of the movement, with never a reference to his over hard work and devotion to the movement of time and money and energy. He audience gave him generous applause.

Judge Bingham's address here probably is the last of the campaign. When it was decided to reopen the books of the association, Chairman Burnham asked that Madison be given help the final week of the campaign and it was decided to ask Judge Bingham, as the most effective speaker of the organization, to deliver the address beginning the week's drive for signatures in Madison. He made one of the most impressive addresses ever heard in the court house, with never a reference to anything except the subject in hand, with no attempt at entertainment, but with an earnestness of purpose that went to the heart of every man who heard him.

Judge Bingham visited the local plant of the Richmond Daily Register while in the city and was shown the plant, one of the most modern of its kind in any city of like size in the country. He was greatly pleased to find the interest in the burley association so keen in Madison and said that it augured well for the result of the drive in the county this week. He went to Louisville by auto in the afternoon.

Organization Manager Joseph Passonneau, Col. R. E. Beatty, General Henry Snell, Captain Leslie Knight and other Lexington dignitaries were here for the speech as were a number from Bourbon, Clark, Scott, and other counties which have signed 90 per cent or more of their crops.

FRIENDS OF POOL BUY MADISON HOUSE

Richmond's tobacco situation, which has been one of the "sore" spots in the burley pool campaign, was somewhat simplified Monday when control of the Madison tobacco warehouse was secured by members of the Burley Tobacco Growers' Co-operative Association.

Announcement was made that the interests of Warfield Bennett and Garrett Million had been purchased by local member of the Burley Association. This purchase gave friends of the Burley Association control of this warehouse, and it will not be opened for reception of tobacco and sales on December 15, as previously announced.

In his address at the court house Monday afternoon, Judge Bingham told of the taking over of this warehouse and said that if additional space were needed to handle the crop of this district Col. Hanger and others would be called upon to build more warehouses. This statement was greeted with prolonged applause.

It is understood that Messrs. Bennett and Million were paid for their holdings in the Madison House.

WOMAN DEADLOCKS ARBUCKLE JURY

San Francisco, Dec. 5.—After forty-one hours of deliberation the seven men and five women which tried Roscoe Arbuckle on a charge of manslaughter in connection with the death of Miss Virginia Rappe, were discharged Sunday when they were unable to agree on a verdict.

The jury was taken into court at its own request at noon, reported a disagreement and asked that it be discharged. The foreman announced that the final ballot stood 10 to 2, but he did not say whether the majority favored conviction or acquittal.

Court officials said, however, that the balloting favored acquittal throughout. The case was set for retrial January 9. In a statement following the jury's return Arbuckle declared one of the five women jurors had prevented his acquittal, "because she refused to allow her fellow jurors to discuss the evidence or reason with her and would not give any reason for her attitude." He did not name the juror.

One of the jury issued a signed statement saying that one of the women jurors, who was in the minority, refused to consider the evidence from the beginning and declared that "she would cast her ballot and would not change it until hell froze over."

LUCIEN BURNAM IN BIG BOOZE RAID

Two Cars of Bottled In Bond Whisky From Bardstown Nabbed At Brooklyn

Lucien A. Burnam, of Richmond, was one of the state prohibition agents out of the Lexington office who made a fruitful raid on automobiles, believed to be returning from Bardstown, at the Jessamine county end of the Brooklyn bridge over the Kentucky river late at night last week. Four men were arrested, two cars confiscated and 120 quarts of bottled in bond whisky seized. Officers working with Mr. Burnam on the raid were F. G. Fields, J. D. Collins, J. T. Tarter and W. H. Kinnaird.

The four men alleged to be occupying the whisky running automobiles are V. W. Barton, 151 Jefferson street, P. S. Neal, 184 North Ashland avenue, Lexington; W. D. Shields, of Troy, and G. H. Minter, of Wilmore.

The five prohibition agents went to Brooklyn bridge Thursday night and halted their automobile at the Jessamine county end of the bridge and waited for developments. The only two cars that crossed the bridge after their arrival were halted and both contained whisky.

Barton and Neal were in the first car, a Buick roadster, and several shots were fired at the wheels of the machine before it was stopped, although the agents were standing on the end of the bridge in the glare of the approaching lights and signified the occupants to stop.

When the roadster was searched it was found to contain ten outboard bags filled with quarts of liquor, each being wrapped in paper. Barton is said to have told the officers that he purchased the liquor at Bardstown for $750. Neal claimed he did not know anything about the whisky but was merely riding from Bardstown to Lexington with Barton.

After waiting an hour, following the seizure of the roadster the officers topped another automobile, a Maxwell touring car containing twenty quarts of moonshine liquor, and occupied by Shields and Minter. When an agent boarded the running board of the car to direct them to a place to park, the driver put on a burst of speed in an attempt to get away and the officer was forced to draw his pistol to stop the driver, it was said. The bottles containing the moonshine liquor were smashed on rocks on the river bank. Shields told the officers, they said, that they purchased the liquor in Nelson county near Bardstown.

All labels and stamps had been removed from the red whisky bottles and officers said they were unable to identify the brand or to determine what distillery it came from.
